

PATIENTS COUNT ON MEDICARE PART D, BUT NEED HELP WITH OUT-OF-POCKET COSTS

The physical and emotional toll cancer takes on an individual and their family is a high enough price to pay. For many Medicare beneficiaries living with cancer, out-of-pocket costs in Medicare Part D can be a major barrier to getting the care they need. Without limits on those costs, life-saving prescription drugs may become unaffordable, and patients can end up splitting doses or skipping their prescriptions altogether. The administration's proposal to cap out-of-pocket costs for beneficiaries in Medicare Part D can prevent this.

It's time to cap out-of-pocket costs in Part D.
Secretary Azar and Congress, let's work together to get it done.
