Fighting cancer starts with knowing you have it.

What sounds like a life-changing cancer diagnosis doesn't have to be. Multi-cancer early detection screenings can test for many different types of cancers at once, which could modernize the way we detect cancer at its earliest stages and give patients more treatment options – but only if they have access to it. Congress must take action to ensure equitable, timely access to this innovation once approved by the Food and Drug Administration and when shown to have clinical benefit, by including the Medicare Multi-Cancer Early Detection Screening Coverage Act in an end-of-year legislative package.

Tell Congress now is the time to pass H.R.1946/S.1873.
